HOW RYAN

By Truth Reporter Evan Whitton

★RONALD RYAN said he would die like a man. He did. He stepped calmly on to the trapdoor a few seconds after 8 am at Pentridge Prison on Friday morning. It was over very quickly. Ryan was hanged in fulfilment of his sentence for murder. The hanging had been postponed three times and efforts to stop it reached a climax on Thursday night with a hastily called meeting at Government House.

Only a few minutes before Ryan was led from the condemned cell to the trapdoor gallows he still insisted he was not guilty of murdering Warden George Hodson.

The warden was shot as Ryan and fellow convict Peter Walker broke out of Pentridge on December 19, 1965.

Ryan had claimed that a rifle he seized from a warden was not capable

Pentridge a few seconds after 8 am on Friday —the scheduled time for his hanging.

The tall, grey-suited hangman pulled the fatal lever at 10 seconds past eight o'clock.

Ryan was brought from the condemned cell in D Division—only a few yards away from the built-in gallows — only moments before the execution.

Ryan was given no needles or sedatives. He joked with warders early on Friday morning.

Ryan gazed silently at the hangman as the big man in dark glasses and peaked cap adjusted the halter around his neck.
