Soft-Set Patios

INSTALLING PATIO PAVERS

Concrete pavers, available at home-improvement centers, can be used to make a simple, attractive patio. Pavers usually have a tab system that helps you space the blocks accurately without measuring. Concrete pavers are available in a variety of patterns, and installation will vary slightly from brand to brand and pattern to pattern. All concrete paving blocks, however, can be laid over a sand-and-gravel bed.

Lay Out the Patio. Use wood 1x2 stakes and string lines to outline your patio. Begin by driving two stakes near the house wall at the patio edges. Set up batter boards at the outer corners. Stretch mason's twine along what will be the perimeter of your patio. (Mason's twine stretches less than string.) Level the twine by hanging a line level at midspan. Check to make sure the layout is square using the 3-4-5 method described in Chapter 11, page 168. Measure from one stake 3 feet along the house, and then 4 feet along the line. The corner is square when the diagonal between the two points measures 5 feet. If the corner is not square, slide the string along the batter boards until it is, and mark the location of the string on the board. For large areas, increase the measurements proportionally. For example, increase the measurements to 6, 8, and 10 feet.

Square the second line that meets the house; then square the remaining side of the patio.

When all the sides are placed properly, make a saw cut where each string line crosses its batter board. If you need to remove the strings during subsequent work, you can pop them back in the cuts without having to remeasure.

Predominantly red pavers complement the green lushness surrounding this patio. To make way for it, trees were cleared and the ground had to be made level.
