Pervasive throughout the universe is the phenomenon of precession, which was discovered by Hipparchus of Nicaea in the Hellenistic Period. Earth which is tilted at an angle of about 23 and one half degrees while revolving around the Sun spins (rotates) around its axis at this angle. Think of the Earth's axis as being a line between the North Pole and South Pole cutting through the center of Earth and extending itself beyond the North Pole and the South Pole into outer space. Earth spinning on its axis of 23 and one half degrees causes a wobble in Earth's axis which will cause the axis to gyrate and trace a complete circle of 360 degrees above Earth in a very long period of time. The same happens when you look down at a top spinning on an angle of 23 and one half degrees. The top's axis you are looking down upon will also trace a complete circle of 360 degrees above the top, but of course in a very short period of time.
